Swiss Ban Sales of Soft Cheese Brand:

BERN (AP) — The authorities banned on Friday the sale, export and production of a Swiss-made soft cheese brand, Vacherin Mont D'Or, and said the cheese was believed to be the source of bacteria that caused the death of at least three persons.

The Federal Health Office ordered a national check of all soft cheese for listeriosis bacteria. Pregnant women and other "persons at risk" wen urged to remove the rind of any soft cheese before eating it. Listeriosis is an encephalitic disease commonly fatal to many mammals and birds, and it can cause miscarriages and sometimes death in humans.

Vacherin Mont d'Or is a popular cheese produced chiefly in the French-speaking canton of Vaud, Almost 90 percent of the exports go to

Press Pries Too Far, Americans Say in Poll

The American public feels that journalists have gone too far in covering the personal affairs of presidential candidates, according to a Gallup survey sponsored by Times Mirror Corp., publishers of the Los Angeles Times and Gallup reported that 68 per-cent of the 1,501 adults inter-viewed by telephone from Oct, 25 to Nov. 4 said the news media went too far" in their coverage of Gary Hart's involvement with Donna Rice and 65 percent did so in reporting that Pat Robert-son's first child was conceived out of wedlock.

However, only 36 percent felt the oews media went too far in covering plagiarism by Senator Joseph R. Biden Jr. and only 32 percent criticized coverage of the way campaign aides of Governor Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts produced videotapes showing Mr. Biden borrowing from a speech by Neil Kinnock, head of the British Labor Party.

More than two-thirds said journalists should always report a candidate's exaggeration of his military or academic record; 55 percent, if it was found that a presidential candidate was homosexual, and 41 percent, if a candidate was having an extra-

An Era of Beaming Candidates

Presidential Hopefuls Use Satellites to Spread the Word

By Lloyd Grove
Washington Paul Service
WASHINGTON -- For the thoroughly modern presidential candidate, getting his message cross is often a matter of putting his signal up.

This year's White House hopefuls have discovered the "satellite feed" in a big way — much more than was possible in 1984.

The technology has improved with the spread of mobile satellite trucks and the increased availability of transmission frequencies. It now permits candidates in beam the product to leave the said to be an increased available. themselves to local television stations and even create their own instant TV networks.

For instance, when Governor Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts recently grinned into the camera, the eyes of Texas were upon him — and the eyes of New Hamp-

"Through the help of the wonderful world of electronics, we're all here for a historic first," said Mr. Dukakis, appearing at Texas A&M University while addressing about 2,500 college students watch-ing live by satellite on Nov. 13 on 56 campuses around the United

Mr. Dukakis's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomina-tion paid about $9,000 for the hour-long broadcast, in which the governor's answers to phoned-in questions were "uplinked" from Texas, bounced off the "9 Star 2" and "Westar 4" orbiters, and "downlinked" to satellite dishes in the primary and caucus states.

U.S. Is the Villain as Budget Problems Take a Heavy Toll

By Paul Lewis

New York Times Service UNITED NATIONS, New York - This year's General Assembly session opened on an up-beat note, with a Security Council peace initiative in the Gulf and signs that the United Nations was shaking off its reputation as a hot air machine, grinding out endless resolutions that no one read.

Now the mood has turned gloomy again as the annual talkathon moves through its second Staff cuts and bureaueratic streamlining are already on the way, the fruit of a revamping agreed to last year. But with the United States still hundreds of millions of dollars behind in its payments, the Uoited Nations is scratching around for funds.

Employees — there are 6,000 in New York — are so despondent about their organization's prospects that they decided to convert the annual Staff Day on Friday from a celebration into a wake. The traditional staff ball, usually a colorful affair, has been canceled. Instead, staff members will gather to discuss their future with the secretary-general and other officials. "Something more sober than dancing and drinking seems in or-

So the country that did more than any other to create the organization after World War II is now portrayed as its wrecker, while the Soviet Union is emerging as its most vociferous supporter.

Staff morale, in an age of austerity, has not been helped by the disclosure that some senior staff members get extra payments from their governments to encourage them to take posts in New York.

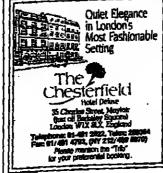

Therese Paquet-Sevigny, a Canadian who is the new undersecretary-general for public information, says she could oot afford to take the job without an additional 588,000 a year on top of her regular The International Civil Service

Gorbachev and Congress

It is certainly arguable whether inviting Mikhail Gorbachev to address a joint meeting of the United States Congress is a good idea. But indisputably the confused squabble between the White House and congressional leaders over that invitation is a shameful global embarrassment. When the speaker of the House of Representatives, Jim Wright, announced nn Tues-day that the Soviet leader would have that honor, there was no dissent from the White House. But at the first whiff of grapeshot on the Republican right, the president's men ducked and blamed the invitation on congressional Democrats. Who knows, at this point, who issued the invitation?

Obviously, any such offer was bound to be controversial. Never before has a foreign dictator and powerful adversary been granted such a distinction. Mr. Gorbachev leads a regime that oppresses its people, invades neighbors and failed to apologize after its whose passengers was a member of Congress. These could have been grounds for not asking him to address Congress.

But whoever decided on the invitation was looking to the future, not the past. That is a fair call when both sides strive for less confrontacional relacions.

Now that the invitation has been overwhelmed by Republican politics, it is not just the Russians who must be baffled. A curious world will be intently watching for clues about American maturity in receiving Mr. Gorbachev. One way out would be to follow the example of President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica, who spoke to a joint congressional caucus. Many would find it hard to believe that President Reagan and Speaker Wright could not resolve this mess and find an appropriate way for the Soviet leader to address members of Congress.

-THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Sheathing Their Daggers

Under pressure from abroad and House and the Democratic majority in Congress seem to have declared a truce one that suggests how the government may work for the next year or so. On the Supreme Court appointment, the budget, arms control and Central America, both sides have moved. There is on comity or new recognition of common ground here. The White House still wants to crush the Democrats, but realizes it cannot. The Democrats do not take President Reagan seriously anymore, but they recognize the political dangers of nonstop conflict.

The situation would be better all around if the president were willing and able to shape hipartisan programs. But his days of leadership appear to be over. At least he is surrounded now by a group of pragmatic conservatives who see the power balance and look for makeshift compromises.

That may be the most that can be expected in the near term, ft is the least that must be done to keep the government functioning. The spectacle of losing two nominees to the Supreme Court had its bright side; a through intermediaries at home, the White dawning in the White House and elsewhere that Attorney General Edwin Meese deals from an ideologically stacked deck. The new choice, Judge Anthony Kennedy, shows the hard-liners have been weakened. The Wall Street crash and screams from Bonn and Tokyo finally forced the White House to negotiate on the budget delicit. The expected package of cuts and taxes does not elicit much confidence, but it is probably better than artificial Gramm-Rudman slashes. The deal just struck over the anti-ballistic missile treaty is Solomonic. It ties Mr. Reagan's hands on new testing for one year, but leaves him free in bargaining with Moscow to threaten more extensive testing thereafter. Even the speaker of the House of Representatives, Jim Wright, and Secretary of State George Shultz almost managed to bury the hatchet in their dispute over Mr. Wright's prominent role in Central American peace talks. The two now pledge not to cause each other "unnecessary problems." Wouldn't that be an inspiring model? -THE NEW YORK TIMES

There's Life Outside Iowa

Should fow have a veto over presidential candidates? That was the question raised by Albert Gore some time past 11 P.M. at the Jefferson-Jackson Dinner in Des Moines on a recent Saturday — a day that 10 of the 12 presidential candidates spent in lows. "There is something wrong," be said, "with a nominating process that gives one state the loudest voice and then produces candidates that can't even carry that state." The test of a candidate, he said, "is not how many times you've met us, which of us got here first, came here most, spent the most money or bought the most tickets to this dinner," but "what he will do for the nation."

The reaction from the audience was not entirely friendly, as one might expect, and spin artists for Mr. Gore's rivals were quick to argue that he was just trying to discount lows because he has been tr the rest of the field in the state.

There is something to be said for Iowa Democratic and Republican party caucus folk: They do listen earnestly and often to all these candidates, and they do approach their choice with some public-spiritedness. And there is something to be said in general for early contests in a few small states where candidates can meet actual voters and voters can judge the candidates up close.

But Senator Gore obviously has a point.

The justification for this kind of political enterprise is that voters in an early state are surrogates for the Democrats and Republicans in bigger and later-voting states, that they make pretty much the same judgments others would make if they got to see the candidates too. But sometimes they are not very good surrogates, fowa Democrats, for example, seem far more dovish on foreign policy than most Democrats nationally; John Glenn's pollster in 1984 found that more than 40 percent of Democratic caucus attenders favored unilateral disarmament. Mr. Gore's argument that his five opponents are too dovish is not likely to be well received by this consotuency. Yet the Democratic Leadership Council poll of Southern Democrais who voted for Ronald Reagan, plns plenty of other political evidence, suggests well on Super Tuesday in the South.

Mr. Gore is right, even if it also fits his interest, when he suggests it would be absurd to let one atypical state have a veto over the nominee, just as it would be absurd to ignore such a state's result. The candidates will keep crowding into Des Moines. But they and others, not least the dear old press, should try to remember that there is life outside Iowa, that Iowa is not all. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Case of the Unjust Hin

The Beech-Nut people cannot say they didn't know the rules. They are right there in Leviticus 19:35-6. "Ye shall do nn unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure," the Almighty instructs. "Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have." Beech-Nut's problem was with the just hin, which turns out to be a liquid measure. The second-largest U.S. baby food manufacturer, a subsidiary of Nestle SA of Switzerland, was indicted a year ago for selling adulterated apple juice. The indictment said it had knowingly sold millions of jars of the phony stuff in 20 states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and five foreign countries over a period of years, It seemed hard to believe; this is baby food we're talking about. Any violations were "technical," the company said stiffly at the time.

But now it has pleaded guilty. What it sold as 100 percent apple juice was actually a sweet liquid made mostly from beet sugar. cane sugar syrup and corn syrup. Its virtue from Nestle's standpoint was that it was 20 percent cheaper than the real thing. The company has agreed to pay a $2 million fine. That is said to be a record for a violation of this kind, and Assistant Attor-ney General Richard Willard hoped that it would "send a strong message that consum-er fraud will not be tolerated by the government." Another prosecutor called the company's decision to admit its guilt rather than contest the charges "refreshing."

We suppose all this is true, and there is no indication any baby was harmed by the phony juice. But a $2 million fine, vast as it may be in the history of the food and drug act, is only a fontnote in an annual report. The Old Testament contains a different standard: "And if ye will oot yet for all this hearken unin me ... f will break the pride of your power; and f will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass." The next time a mighty corporation cheats on baby food, maybe that is the way to go.

Rumblings in Moscow Spell Big Trouble for Gorbachev

WASHINGTON — Is Mikhail Gorba-chev in trouble? It is hard to believe that a Soviet leader who is about to participate in a Washingtoo summit meeting with his American counterpart could be facing open opposition. Yet the humiliating dismissal of Boris Yeltsin as head of the Moscow party and government apparatus and the all-

Monday have to be regarded as a serious setback for Mr. Gorbache Mnreover, the way Mr. Yeltsin was fired, and the events leading up to his dismissal, suggest that this may indeed be a preview of coming attractions: the dismissal of General out attack on democratization in Pravda on

Secretary Gorbachev himself.

Nothing quite like the firing of Mr. Yeltsin and such a broadside attack on democratization has occurred since Mr. Gorbachev assumed control. Certainly. Communist Party officials have been fired; for that matter Viktor Grisbin, Mr. Yeltsin's predecessor, was fired. But Mr. Grishin was fired for obstruction, incompetence and knavery, not because be helieved too much in the reform process. Similarly, democratization and glasnost have been attacked, but never in such an all-out way and in such an important paper as Pravda.

There is no reason the reform process in the Soviet Union cannot suffer setbacks. After all, this seems to happen in China every few months and yet the reforms continue. Soviet reformers say American observers should be applauding debate and discussion in the Politburo and the Central Committee when for years. Americans berated them because everything was decided unanimously. By Marshall I. Goldman

But there are more sinister implications here. Several aspects of Mr. Yeltsin's dismissal were particularly distressing. The fact that he found it necessary to criticize himself for his ambitions and selfishness is reminiscent of tactics used by Stalin during the purges and Mao during the Cultural Revolution. In contrast, when Hu Yaobang was removed as the Chinese Communist Party secretary a few months ago, he made no such self-criti-cisms. After all, Mr. Yeltsin's greatest shortcoming was that he was too passionate about the reforms Mr. Gorbachev was espousing. It is distressing that not only was there a manimous vote against Mr. Yelvin at a Moscow party meeting, but that those who attacked him did so with such vehennence.

That makes it all the more likely that Mr. Yeltsin's real sin was in being too thorough in his crackdown on Moscow bureaucrats. Coming Irom Sverdiosk, he felt few ties in the existing bureaucracy and began a wholesale houserleaning.

That was received with something less than enthusiasm in the bureaucracy. In a letter to a Moscow newspaper, the wife of one bureau-crat warned Mr. Yeltsin: "Don't snipe at us ... You are not strong enough. We will rip up the puny sails of your economic re-structuring." Another caution, "Go back to Sverdlosk while you still have time." What should make Mr. Gorbachev nervous is that he has been no less committed to the purge of inept, corrupt and bypassed bureau-crats, and oot at the Moscow level, but at the national level. Those bureaucrats who have ordinates by name, including those appointed by Mr. Gorbachev himself. If anything, Mr.

Gorbachev has been even more passionate in his commitment to economic reform and his criticisms of what heretofore has been trumpeted widely as past Soviet achievements. No such thing, insists Mr. Gorbachev. In referring to the reasons he wanted economic reforms, Mr. Gorbachev explained in Riga in February that the economy "had gone down-hill so that it stank." He described the Soviet economy as being in a "pre-crisis condition."

Such criticisms have not been received kindly by more conservative members of the Politburo like Yegor Ligachev, the second most powerful member of the Pointburo, and Viktor Chebrikov, the head of the KGB, Mr. Ligachev complained in Angust that people abroad and even "some people in our own country tried to denigrate the entire path of the building of socialism in the U.S.S.R. and present it as an unbroken chain of errors." That is not only a criticism of Mr. Yeltsin, but of Mr. Torrischer.

Mr. Chebnikov, in his speech in September. criticized those in the West who seek to instill in Soviet people the bourgeois understanding of democracy ... install political and ideological pluralism ... and plant the virus of na-tionalism. In light of Prayda's attack on democratization, this attack is especially chilling. Since September 1986, Mr. Gorbachev has repeatedly insisted that "all of us, comrades, national level. Those bureaucrais who have not yet been purged are opposed to Mr. Gorbachev just as they were to Mr. Yelisin. Nor does the similarity stop there. There is almost nothing in Mr. Yelisin's speeches that has not appeared in Mr. Gorbachev's pronouncements. That includes criticisas of subordinates by name, including those appointed zation is directed largely at Mr. Gorbachev.

That Mr. Gorbachev has continued in defend his push for democratization, even after the Pravda article, suggests that he is as yet still in charge. The fact that Mr. Yellsin was named first deputy chairman of the Soviet State Committee for Construction shows that Mr. Gorbachev is willing and able to prevent Mr. Yeltsin's complete disgrace.

But it is ironic that Mikhail Gorbachev like Ronald Reagan, will come in the summit meeting worried by attacks on his domestic policies. That is why both men need each other and an international agreement.

Nicaragua: For Exiles, a Time of Exhilaration and Great Concern

MIAMI — As everyone knows, Miami is an odd place. It is definitely part of the United States, but it is also the capital of a misty Latin American republic called Exilia, Refugia or Nostalgia, according to choice. It lives steadily preoccupied with Cuba, some 90 miles and a world away, but Cuba can be approached from various directions. At the moment, it is being approached via Nicaragna. For Nicaragnan exiles this is a period of great concern, of both fear and exhilaration as maneuvers proceed around the possibility of a negotiated peace. Lives, careers, hopes are at stake. Even civil war creates vested interests in its own perpetuation.

No one can speak out against peace. That, says Arturo José Cruz, a former member of the Sandinist junta and for a time, until he quit in disgust, its ambassador in Washington, is the great moral strength of the process faunched by President Oscar Arias Sánchez of Costa Rica.

"They say Arias has a carrot and no stick," Mr. Cruz said in a conversation, "but he does have a stick and it is effective in all of Latin America. He has shrewdly, with great political pragmatism, arranged to construct an offer which cannot be openly refused."

But many are afraid of peace, lest it permit consolidation of the Sandinist regime, Mr. Cruz believes that leaders of the contra movement, in which he does not take part, long held the illusion that sooner or later the United States would send its own forces to overthrow the Sandinists, so the exiled opposition had only to By Flora Lewis prevent the Managua regime from cementing its foundations. "It made us look like provocateurs, insensitive to the need for social change, without anything to offer. That was the biggest mistake."

He urges patience, to let mediation and negotiation advance without proclaiming failure so that elections can be held in 1990. The focus should be on the anti-Sandinist opposition in the country, not on the rebels based outside, Mr. Cruz said, though he agrees with the contras that they should not disarm if a cease-fire is achieved, until there is a political settlement.

Some supporters of the contra movement claim that it is more mited now that work is beginning on the Arias plan than ever before. But there is much evidence of disagreement among them, particularly on what will happen to the movement if the flow of U.S. arms is cut off and a ceaso-fire takes hold. The essential difference is whether they think their support will dry up in bitter distribution or spread with more active hope for political change.

The more thoughtful ones insist that just as the Sandinists proclaimed themselves a political-military force, there must be both a political and a military approach to settlement. Alvaro Taboada, a political analyst, points out that if the contras could achieve a military victory, which is doubtful, it would bring a bloodbath, another Sourcea and in a few years another, perhaps-stronger Communist movement. "We need both strength and flexibility," he said, "because flexibility without strength becomes retreat, and strength without flexibility becomes stupidity."

But for the Cuban-Americans, Nicaragua is a metaphor. The leaders, who have learned to make their weight felt in U.S. politics in a way that is unavailable to the Nicaraguans, are basically aware that no decisions are currently possible which would make a difference on the question of Cuba.

Luis Lauredo is a Democrat and considers himself a contrist in the narrow range of Cuban-American opinion, where the vnte goes 90 percent to Republicans. Yet to get his support, he says, a Democratic presidential candidate must have a "reasonable" policy on Nicaragua, which to him means backing the anti-Candinists. And what would be a "reasonable" policy toward Cuba? Neither be nor Cuban-Americans who put themselves no

Do they want to fight their battle against Fidel Castro to the last Nicaraguan? "That is an important question, a very important question." Mr. Lauredo said somberly — but again, no answers. This is going to have an influence on the politics of U.S. Central American policy. It must be resisted: Nicaragua is not Cuba, and the view from Miami is through a distorting lens. Exilia, Refugia and Nostalgia are not the right places for making U.S. foreign policy. There is a much larger national interest in promoting the well-being of Central America.

Chile: As the Opposition Turns Militant, Terror Dons a New Mask

By Ariel Dorfman

D URHAM, North Carolina -Fourteen years after General Augusto Pinocher's military coup de-stroyed democracy in Chile, his reign of terror oot only is continuing but has noticeably worsened in the last month.

Why? Is General Pinochet deliberately spreading fear in order to control an increasingly militant opposition that may vote him out of office io a presidential plebiscite that m take place before March 1989?

Young people are again disappearing, journalists are being imprisoned, prominent citizens are being nutlawed for their personal opinions, housewives are being tortured in their homes and dissidents are being shot in cold blood.

Until oow, death squads had always singled out individuals for their warnings: a judge whn was investi-gating a torture incident, a trade union official who led a general strike, a bishop who had called for the resignation of General Pinochet. But on Nov. 4, a new form of intimidation was inaugurated: 25 nf Chile's most eminent actors, directors and playwrights (among whom are some of my closest friends) received letters giving each until the end of the month to leave the country or be executed. That same morning, seveo alternative-theater groups, comprising 52 actors, collecovely got similar messages. All of the messages were signed by a death squad that called itself "Trizano." It is named for a Chilean frontiersman who became notorious for organizing vigilantes who hunted down and massacred Indians by the zacoos in Chile and abroad have accosed the government and the military of complicity. Even if General Pinochet is not personally involved in these murderous activities, he is ultimately responsible for not having made the slightest effort to bring the criminals to justice. This tyrant, after all, once dared that not a leaf moves in without his willing it. In all the years of persecution and indiscriminate murder, not one human rights violator has been condemned. Until these miscreants who roam the streets freely during curfew hours, who use vehicles with official license plates - are tried and punished, and until they know that they will be held accountable for each life they have taken, there is no reason they should cease their onslaught. The Reagan administration, in a welcome move, has stepped up its public criticism of the Pinochet regime. But stronger leverage is needed. The Pinochet regime depends on foreign loans to keep afloat. Washington should condition its support for such loans upon Chile's promptly bringing to justice'—certainly before the plebiscite is called — those re-sponsible for the wave of abductions, assassinations and death threats. General Pinochet promised law and order when he led his military takeover of a country proud of its democratic tradition. Instead, be has

Ronald Reagan's twitight year is not collapse but compromise — compromise forced upon a president who lost his political clout in last year's Senate elections and his moral authority shortly thereafter in the Iran-contra affair. Mr. Reagan can no longer roll over his opponents. He is being forced to compromise: on taxes, on judges, on contras, even on the SDL But a president who is forced to deal rather than rule is a return to post-Watergate normality. It is melodrama to call it collapse.

The apocalypses follow so hard on each other that it is hard to keep track. Just five or six years ago, at the height of the nuclear hysteria, you could not escape the idea that tonorrow was going to be The Day After. This followed the depletion-nf-resources doomsday scenario spurred by the oil shocks. In 1973 the Club of Rome offered the much parroted prediction that the world would run out of gold, tin, mercury and silver by now, and of oil five years hence. Before that, in 1968 to be exact, Paul Ehrlich's "The Population Bomb" predicted that inade-quate family planning would cause worldwide famine, pestilence and ouclear war by 1983. It was a best seller. Now we are warned that a birth dearth will do us in.

With the investigation now com-

"If the purpose of the hearings was to get the story and inform Congress and the American people, think we did it," said Warren B. "I think the skies are clearing Rudman, Republican of New Hampshire, who is vice chairman surer of the Electoral Council, of the Senate committee. Yet even he said he was not certain that the committee had found all the secret

White House operations. "I'm reasonably sure," he said.
"But I have my doubts."

Mr. Rudman and other senior members of both committees recalled that the hearings last summer had bared in painful detail a startling saga of how U.S. policy on Iran and Nicaragua had been set by a few members of President Ronald Reagan's National Security Council staff and carried out by a secret band of private operatives behind the backs of Congress, the State Department and the Defense Department.

But most of the more than two dozen lawmakers and staff assistants interviewed agreed that the investigative committees should ings appeared on television.

WASHINGTON — While most and their staff assistants said much ments rather than relying on the voluntary cooperation of the White House and government agencies. They also said they were hampered by unrealistic time constraints, by the failure to interview some potential witnesses and by a deal made to obtain testimony from Lieutenant Colonel Oliver L North that they believe prevented full exploitation of his testimony.

These points were made most forcefully in the additional views filed by four Democratic members of the House committee: Representatives Dante B. Fascell of Florida, Louis Stokes of Ohio, Jack Brooks of Texas and Peter W. Rodino Jr. of New Jersey. As one example, they said that when, in late July, the investigators finally obtained the phone logs of Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d, they found many names of witnesses who had been previously interviewed.

"All the leads generated by the logs would have required re-inter-viewing witnesses," the four con-gressmen wrote. "In the main, this was not done."

While members of the Senate panel generally were less critical of the investigation, Senator David L. Boren, Democrat of Oklahoma, "There are some mysteries that clearly remain - the origin of the Iran affair and the diversion for example. I don't think there's been any last word on those."

Mr. Boren noted that the committees had not been able to determine "with absolute certainty" the the impact of television."

Furthermore, several Democrats Mr. Casey's death in May and the destruction of documents by Colonel North and others meant that those questions might never have been answered. But they said that with more thorough investigative procedures and more time, they might have been more clearly resolved. Everyone interviewed agreed that the panel of 26 members -15 representatives and 11 senators -proved to be unwieldy.

The size resulted from the decision of House and Senate leaders in December to create separate invesrigative committees. The decision, the leaders acknowledged, resulted from institutional jealousies.

In February, the committees' leaders realized that it was impractical to conduct parallel investigations competing for witnesses and headlines. At the initiation of Senator Daniel K. Inouye, Democrat of Hawaii and chairman of the Senate panel, the committees agreed to merge their investigations. Some of those interviewed said the committees probably should have hired an expert to advise them how to make the best use of television. Others took the position of John W. Nields Jr., the chief counsel of the House committee, who said, "I resist the notion that the processes of government are going to be controlled by television or

There had been some discussion in New York about whether or not to resume publication in Paris. One who favored doing so was Bill Robinson, the bluff, hearty advertising manager. Bill flew to Pans and got permission from the Supreme Commander himself, Dwight D. Eisenhower, for the Herald to receive a supply of newsprint, which was under military control.

We were a small band of very lucky people. Lucky be-cause we had the most wonderful job imaginable, to edit and publish a newspaper of great quality. night by Eric and me, sitting ar his desk in the corner. During the early months Frank Webb had a very tough job because he was the entire copy desk. When we went from two all the way up to four pages regularly, Eric hired some Stripes men to moonlight as copy readers. The big news of 1945 rolled on. As spring made life in Paris more comfortable, it became apparent that despite the bitter battles in Germany the war was drawing to a close. But less than a month before it ended we had a double banner headline: ROOSEVELT DIES OF headline four inches high: VICTORY. Later headlines told of the dropping of the atomic bomb at Hiroshims and, finally, the end of the war with Japan. Yes, we were lucky to have our little — in size — newspaper in 1945. And, thank God. we never saw another such year. Because our big news was inexorably of suffering, death and destruction.

Cunard Cruise Lines, the British operator of the Queen Elizabeth 2 luxury liner, said that although there had been no sign of a business turndown, "experience dictates that a certain pattern will follow" the dollar's fall.

"We are likely to do better in the United Kingdom and Europe, and marginally less well in the U.S.A.," he said. "Because we have a strong presence both sides of the Atlantic, one tends to balance out the other."

He said that Volkswagen of America had set a conservative sales goal of 220,000 vehicles for 1988, and that the U.S. market was likely to shrink by more than one million in the coming year to 9.3 million cars.

VW's move apparently bucks a trend of increased foreign interest in manufacturing in the United States that was spurred by the weakness of the dollar.

Cuba to Retake "Undesirables"

The Associated Press WASHINGTON - Cuba, in a policy reversal, has agreed to the repatriation of more than 2,700 Cuban "undesirables" who came to the United States aboard the 1980 Mariel boatlift, the State Department said Friday.

A department spokesman also said that, as part of an agreement to re-establish tormal immigration ties, more than 20,000 Cubans would be eligible for U.S. resident visas annually.

The accord is similar to one nogotiated in 1984 but suspended by Cuba to protest Radio Marti, a Voice of America broadcast to Cuba. Since the agreement was suspended, the two countries have not had normal immigration ties, al-though the United States has allowed bundreds of long-term Cuban political prisoners to

Arson Called Unlikely In U.K. Subway Blaze

LONDON - The police said Friday that the cause of a subway fire that killed 30 persons remained a mystery, but that arson appeared

"It is becoming more and more unlikely that this incident is in the area of crime, said Detective Superintendent Tony Clift, head of the police investigation into the fire Wednesday at the King's Cross station of the London Underground.

Investigators are focusing on the wooden slats of an escalator where the fire is believed to have started, he said, but no clues have emerged William Palmer, an assistant chief constable, said, "We haven't got a glimmer as to the true cause."

As the police officials spoke, investigators searched the charred station. Outside, flowers and cards piled up on a table in memory of Scotland Yard released the names of 18 of the 30 persons killed.

The youngest was Dean Cottle, 7, of London. His mother, Shisheila, 25, also died in the fire. [Also among the victims was Sara Felicity Dearden, 32, a Reuters correspondent in Bonn, Reuters reported.] Six of the dead were so badly burned that they had not been identified by Friday afternoon. A further six were identified but their names were withheld until relatives could be notified. Of the 80 or so people injured, 21 remained hospitalized Friday, 12 in serious condition. The fire broke out at the end of the evening rush hour, filling the King's Cross station with smoke and trapping hundreds of commuters. The station is the busiest on the Underground.

Investigators said they believed the blaze started on the surface of an escalator and spread within minutes to the main ticket hall, where most of the dead were found. The escalator has wooden slats, metal sides and rubber handrails.

One theory is that a spark ignited a cleaning solvent used on the

Conservatives in Congress Reject Gorbachev Address

WASHINGTON - Mikhaii S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, will not be invited to address a joint meeting of Congress during the summit meeting in early December, two congressional leaders said

"Definitely not," said the House Republican leader, Robert H. Michel of Illinois, when asked if Mr. Gorbachev would be invited to address the lawmakers, as proposed. There are too many risks involved." Bob Dole of Kansas, the Senate Republican leader, said,

"It's pretty well agreed it isn't going to happen."

The possibility of Mr. Gorbachev addressing a joint meeting of Congress had been suggested as a way to win Senate ratification of an arms accord that is to be signed by the Soviet leader and President Ronald Reagan during their meeting Dec. 7 to 10 in Washington. However, conservative Republicans strongly objected, promito wear black arm bands and to walk out on Mr. Gorbachev. Mr. Michel said congressional leaders, instead of convening a joint session, would work out other arrangements for Mr. Gorbachev to meet with members of Congress.

Mr. Dole suggested that Mr. Gorbachev be afforded 10 to 15 minutes on American television to speak, as long as Mr. Reagan gets similar access to Soviet television if he travels to Moscow for a summit meeting next year, as now planned.

Mr. Brown said that regardless of any final agreement, it would have been better if Washington had just allowed the automatic spending cuts to take effect.

Forecasts Are Hopeful, But Are They Realistic?

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service

EW YORK - How valid are the assumptions that underlie the relatively hopeful forecast of most American economists and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris that the U.S. economy will continue growing slowly next year? One assumption is that the earlier stock market boom was a classic bubble, propolated to the plant and the stock market boom was a classic bubble. mirelated to the slow growth of the real economy. Inevitably, the market's collapse aroused memories of 1929 and fears that a depression would follow.

But Lawrence A. Veit of Brown Brothers Harriman & Co. says: It should be remembered that the U.S. economy had actually five years of prosperity."

The Dow Jones industrial average fell from a peak of 734.91 on Dec. 13, 1961, to a bottom of 535.76 on June 26, 1962 — a fall of 27 percent, compared with the 36 percent drop from the peak on Aug. 17 this year to the low Oct. 19. This has since been ameliorated to about 28 percent.
The more hopeful economists contend that the market's drop since August has simply brought it back closer to a more realistic relationship with present and prospective earnings.

A second assumption behind the consensus forecast is that a better set of fiscal and monetary policies is emerging to this country better set of fiscal and monetary policies is emerging to this country and abroad and will gradually restore a balance between the United States and its trading partners.

However, the protracted negotiations in Washington over the budget deficit have cast doubts on the ability of the United States to put its fiscal house in order.

OME ECONOMISTS question whether cutting spending is the right thing to do now, with the economy in a weaker state, and they say it would repeat the fiscal blunders of 1930 to Herbert Stein, who was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Richard Nixon, stresses the danger of too restrictive a budget policy now. But he maintains that cutting the 1988 budget deficit by at least the $23 billion called for by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law has become a symbol of the government's ability to govern.

The large majority of economists assume that monetary policy

this time will be far wiser than it was during the Great Depression, which many attribute to the Federal Reserve's allowing the money which many attribute to the Federal Reserve's allowing the money supply to collapse. Many stress that the Fed has already done the most essential thing now in amouncing and executing a policy of supplying liquidity to meet the needs of the economy.

The hopeful assumption of many economists is that bringing down interest rates will not cause the dollar to go into a deep plunge. But there is a split among the economists, with some favoring higher interest rates and heavy intervention if necessary to defend the dollar. But such policies, others given would assure a defend the dollar. But such policies, others argue, would assure a recession and a prolongation of the trade deficit.

This is a genuine problem. The Fed will have an incredibly difficult task in the months ahead in warding off market fears of a followed of the control of the steep recession on the other warding of the control of the falling dollar on one side and of a steep recession on the other -- or even both at the same time.

A-critical assumption of the relative optimists is that consumer. and business confidence has not been so seriously damaged that it will not be restored by more decisive leadership and better national economic policies, both in the United States and abroad. However, ber. The previous best one-month the markets are still anxiously waiting for stronger evidence that such leadership and international economic cooperation will be forthcoming in time to rescue confidence.

Prices Rise 0.4% In U.S.

Inflation 4.8% At Annual Rate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - U.S. consumer prices rose 0.4 percent in October as a decline in energy costs failed to offset increases for food and a wide range of other goods, the government reported Friday. It was the steepest gain since a 0.5 percent rise in August.

The Labor Department report, following one last week showing that wholesale prices had declined 0.2 percent in October, was viewed by analysts as evidence that infla-tion remained tame despite problems stemming from the stock mar-ket collapse on Oct. 19.

Retail price gains for the first 10 months amounted to a moderate 4.8 percent annual rate, the Labor Department said. Much of that gain resulted from a sharp rebound energy prices earlier in the year.

If October's 0.4 increase continued for 12 months, the annual rate would be just 4.6 percent. Septem-ber's gain was 0.2 percent.

By contrast, consumer prices rose only 1.1 percent last year, largely because of a drop in oil prices. Inflation this year is more in line with the levels that prevailed from 1982 through 1985,

Energy costs were down 0.9 percent in October after a 0.5 percent fall in September. Food costs were up 0.3 percent after a 0.5 percent rise in September. For goods other than food and energy, prices rose 0.5 percent after a 0.2 percent rise in September. This included a 0.6 rise in prices for new automobiles after a 0.1

percent gain in September. Part of the increase reflects more expensive imports. The October increase left the Consumer Price Index, which is not adjusted for seasonal fluctuations, at 345.3. That means a selection of goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $34.54 last month, up from $33.05 in October 1986. In another report, the department said that wages, adjusted for inflation, rose in October at the best pace in four years. Average weekly earnings rose 0.9 percent after falling 1.1 percent in Septem-earnings also rose 0.9 percent.

Singapore Mourns Loss of 'Oilies'

But After Shake-Out, Industry Survives by Diversifying

By Michael Ruchardson rnational Herald Tribune

SINGAPORE - At the Jockey Pub, where expatriate "oilies" once crowded in to swap stories about drilling exploits and Houston's hottest chile, an air of desolation now reigns.

The live country and western band has long since been replaced by recorded music that echoes across a empty room. And while the barman, Gary Long Say Heng, has a lot more time to listen these days, the customers recount mostly woeful tales of dwindling orders and sagging profits.

The Jockey might be a symbol of hard times in the Asian oil exploration sector, which has contracted sharply in the past six years. "We used to be full every day at lunch and dinner," Mr. Long said. "This was a second home for the oil riggers.

In the decade leading up to the early 1980s, Singapore joined Houston; Stavanger, Norway, and Aberdeen, Scotland, as one of the busiest oil capitals in the world.

By 1981, five Singapore companies accounted for about 20 of the 130 offshore drilling rigs being built worldwide, making the island nation the second-biggest rig supplier. The 20 orders were worth an estimated $700 million and provided jobs for about 5,000 workers. Other thousands of workers were employed by the country's booming oil refineries or on the rigs offsbore.

Since then, an oil glut has caused crude prices to plunge, and demand for the rigs has dried up. Two of the five rig construction companies have gone out of business, a third has withdrawn from Singapore and a fourth has scaled back its activities after Far East Levingston Shipbuilding Ltd., the main survivor, has received orders for only three jack-up rigs since the early 1980s. One was delivered to the Soviet Union in 1984.

A second, the Columbus Explorer, was handed over in September 1986 to the joint venture Seven Eighty Offshore SA, but the Singapore, French and American partners plan on selling the rig as soon as market conditions improve. A third jack-up rig is to be delivered early next year to Vietsovpetro, a Soviet-Vietnamese joint venture in oil exploration and production off the Vietnamese coast. "There has been a very severe shakeout in our industry," said Choo Chiau Beng, managing director of Far East Levingston, in an interview. The company's profit plummeted from a peak in 1982 of nearly 70 million Singapore dollars ($34.3 millioo) to 10 million dollars in 1985 before edging up last year to 16.8 million dollars.

In that period, the prices of crude oil and refined products fluctuated wildly. The crude price fell from about $28 a barrel at the end of 1985 to below $10 a barrel in mid-1986. It has zigzagged since to its current level of about $18 a barrel. The price movements also have brought hard times to dozens of companies that use Singapore as a regional base for supplying oil-related equipment

BA Lowers Bid For Caledonian To £147 Million

The government gave its conditional approval for the merger on Nov. 11. But BA said then that it would renegotiate because of the collapse in stock market prices.

BA had originally offered £237 million for the smaller carrier. British Caledonian, which re-ported a £19.3 million pretax loss last year, had said that the merger was a key to its survival.

Analysts had predicted that BA's revised bid would be around £155

BA shares were quoted at 135 pence after the announcement, 1 penny above the opening price of 134 pence. They had dipped to 130 pence before the announcement. Some market sources said that the revised offer was a fair price and likely to be accepted.

"The venture capital institution Investors in Industry PLC, which owns 41 percent of BCal, has said it looks like a good price," said a stockboker who asked not to be identified.

British Caledonian's chairman Sir Adam Thomson, has kept open the possibility of a partial takeover by a foreign airline if the new BA offer was not good enough.

Industry sources said the airline was holding talks with up to six European and U.S airlines.

On Wednesday, Scandinavian Airlines System said it had been holding talks with British Caledo-SAS's president, Jan Carlzon,

New York Bank Reduces Bid for Irving to $68

NEW YORK - Bank of New York Co. said Friday it has lowered its offer for Irving Bank Corp. to $68 per share from $80 to reflect a sharp de cline in banks' shares, but said the new offer would not change the total current value of the offer from $1.25 billion.

"We are changing the mix, not the price," J. Carter Bacot, Bank of New York's chairman, Irving had rejected the original offer, then valued at $1.47 million, and declared a dividend distribution plan to dissuade its suitor from continuing. The plunge in Bank of New York's stock price from around $45 in September to $28,375 on Friday has reduced the value of the bid to about $1.25 billion.

The new offer is for $68 in cash for 39 percent of Irving common shares, and 2.4 Bank of New York shares for each remaining share, or a "blended" value of about $66 per share based on Thursday's closing stock prices. The company originally offered $80 per share for 47.4 percent of Irving's stock, and 1.9 Bank of New York shares for each remaining share.

OAU Official Says African Debt Could Top $550 Billion by 2,000

Apence France-Presse

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Africa's debt burden could soar to more than $550 billion by the year 2,000, a senior Organization of African Unity official warned Friday. He assailed international efforts to reduce the $200 billion debt as "ineffective."

Ahmed Haggag, the organization's assistant secretary-general, said that creditor countries and institutions were forcing Africa into repeated reschedulings, and painful, and politically risky structural adjustments.

He did not specify who was responsible, but African countries have often been embittered by adjustments demanded by the International Monetary Fund.

Speaking in Addis Ababa at the opening of a two-day meeting of an OAU debt committee, Mr. Haggag voiced "appreciation of the friendly and sympathetic acts of some of the Western countries."

TOKYO - Japan's leading commercial banks on Friday re-ported higher profits for the six months to the end of September, but analysts have doubts about whether they can maintain their

Total net profit at the 13 banks centered in Japan's cities rose 24.1 percent in the first half from a year

"The results were reasonably healthy and a bit more than expected," said Simon Smithson, financial analyst with the brokerage Kleinwort Benson, "But I don't see then keeping the same 20 percent growth rates for the full year."

Fuji Bank Ltd., whose net profit rose 35.9 percent to 62.32 billion yen ($462 million at current rates), led the ranks in net earnings.

Mitsubishi Bank led in terms of current profits, which rose 60.7 percent to 138.92 billion yen. Current profit includes income from stock and bond transactions but not special profits or losses.

Sumitomo Bank Ltd., once Japan's most profitable urban bank, reported that net profit slid 14.7 percent. But analysts said the decline was less than expected after the October 1986 merger with the debt-ridden Heiwa Sogo Bank. "It's good news for Sumitomo.

They're absorbing Heiwa faster than expected," said Brian Waterhouse, an analyst with the James Capel Pacific brokerage house, ior securities houses in the same period, analysts said. Sumitomo said that bond dealing profits rose 94.3 percent from a year earlier despite the slump in the market.

Funds are flooding into the banks as investors seek a safe haven for their money after the world stock market collapse. But whether the banks can find enough profitable outlets for the funds remains m be seen, they said.

They are sitting on huge funds and they don't know what to do," said Ivo Felder, an analyst at Baring Securities.

But others said that companies, wary of the securities markets. could once again turn to banks for capital investment. "If equity markets remain volatile, companies will have second thoughts about raising cash there and will go back in the banks," Mr. Waterhouse said.

Declining demand for real estate loans and a possible rise in the cost of funds could also dampen profits for the full year, analysts said.

Drexel and Goldman To Cut Staff

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK - Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. said Friday that it would lay off some personnel, a day after Goldman, Sachs & Co. made staffing cuts.

A Drexel spokeswoman declined to specify how many of the firm's 11,000 employees would be laid off, Drexel sources quoted by Reuters said the cuts would be made throughout the firm and would be concentrated in the high-yield de-partment based in California. They appeared to be referring to the de-partment dealing in junk bonds, high-yield securities of low investment grade.

"We're not the first firm to contract and we won't be the last," a spokesman said Friday. Drexel source said, referring to recent major cutbacks by Wall Street investment banks.

600 people. Several of those furloughed by the investment banking firm said they had been told that another round of dismissals was expected.

An official at Goldman, Sachs said that fewer than 100 staff members had been laid off but confirmed that more were expected.

Most of the layoffs were in fixedincome sales, which one official said had become overstaffed in the boom of the past several years. Some sales professionals were also laid off in the money-market division, sources said.

By David E. Sanger

New York Times Service NEW YORK -- Until recently IBM and Apple, the big two of personal computers, have turned out models as different as a utilitarian Volvo and a sporty Porsche, Now, they risk becoming as alike as a Pontiac and a

At long last, International Business Machines Corp. is preparing to ship a new personal computer operating system that 2-3, its ubiquitous IBM PC will bring the easy-to-use, intu-itive approach of Apple Com-puter Inc.'s Macintosh to IBM screens for the first time.

Meanwhile, Apple is dispensing with its computer-in-a-backpack image, touting its Macin-tosh 11 — which resembles nothing more than IBM's PC-AT - as a heavy-duty corporate computer that connects into mainframes and runs accounting

It is almost as if rival IBM and Apple engineers switched coasts and began toiling in each other's laboratories. In fact, the office product lines at New York-based IBM and California-based Apple are slowly converging, and that phenomenon reflects a fundamental change - one that seems bound to focus the business more on a marketing battle than on a technology contest. "When you look at what comes out of the box, we are moving in an era of greater and greater homogeneity," Mitchell D. Kapor, the founder of Lotus Development Corp., said recent-ly, pointing to the IBM and Apole computers in his Cambridge, Massachusetts, office.

Features that distinguished personal computers in the past - differences in ease of use, microprocessor speed, memory, disk drives and expandability are quickly eroding. Moreover, just as cars all burn the same gas, personal computers are starting to run on the same software.

By and large, programs written for IBM computers cannot run on a Macintosh, and vice versa. But software houses are accelerating the pace at which they bring out their best sellers for both. Microsoft Corp. recently is-sued n version of its best-selling Macintosh spreadsheet, called Excel, for the new IBM PS-2 line.

Lotus, meanwhile, is readying for the Macintosh a version of 1spreadsheet program. To control the destiny of their own machines, IBM and Apple are focusing more of their resources on creating software that distinguishes their machines ously, that was a task left almost entirely to third parties. No one contends that Apple and IBM computers are exactly alike. The two still run on different microprocessors and offer a host of differing features.

from the competition's. Previ-

"Obviously, there are not yet identical offerings, and there won't be," said Benjamin Rosen, the venture capitalist and chairman of Compater of TRM Corp., the big maker of IBM-compatible machines. "But we are moving in that direction."

Whether the move is good or bad is a matter of dispute. Those who welcome the trend say it will make life easier for office workers, who often dread the arrival of an unfamiliar computer system. A dedicated user of Lotus 1-2-3, for example, must relearn everything to run the Excel spreadsheet on the Macintosh. But once equivalent programs run on both machines, it will require almost no retraining to skip from the Macintosh to one

On the other hand, some fear that a prematurely grown-up computer industry, discouraging technological enumpetition

among hardware designs, could squelch fresh approaches.

"I don't think it is a real danger, because radical change is still more likely than ant in this business," said Mr. Kapor, who left Lotus last year to work on software projects intended to make computers easier to use.

But already computer industry executives are turning their minds to the question of how to distinguish computers that are basically more alike than different. To some, the changes mirror what happened in the auto industry decades ago, when practicality and buying patterns began to tame outlandish designs, mak-ing many models indistinguish-

"Think about what would happen if every Labor Day com-puter makers brought out a new model year," said Riehard Shaffer, editor of the Technologic Computer Letter. "People might be embarrassed to have a computer on their desk that didn't have tail fins."

Such issues seem made for the marketing specialists who have taken command of computer companies. First among them is John Sculley, the chief executive of Apple.

"The differences between IBM and Apple are still tremendous - even if we are beginning to wear suits and ties, and even if we are starting to visit corporate clients by going through their front doors," Mr. Sculley said, alluding to the fact that many corporate employees previously bought Macintoshes on the sly. slipping them into hack offices while purchasing departments were buying only IBM PCs.

But "from bere on out," he said recently, "success is going to involve a lot more than technical innovation. Ease of use is going to become the next big battleground. And the winner is going to be the one who is ahead in the elegance of the details."

SINGAPORE: Oil Rig Construction Sector Is a Chost of Its Former Self

Job cuts involving foreigners

working for Singapore-based firms have been particularly severe because their salaries and living expenses generally are higher than those of their local counterparts. Officials at the U.S. Embassy estimated that 11,000 Americans were living in Singapore in 1981. Today there are thought to be just over 6,000. The biggest loss was caused by Cuthroat competition is now the rule for the 250 oil equipment and service companies in Singapore, according to a senior executive at one of the biggest international firms dealing in those areas.

The estimated assets per U.S. company involved in the manufacture of oil equipment in Singapore has been halved, from nearly $20 million in 1984 to $9.8 million in month by the U.S. Embassy.

Mr. Hwang said that for the Sin-gapore economy as a whole, and for the oil industry in particular, the "key to survival is flexibility.

Dollar Firms Slightly on Budget Pact

NEW YORK - The dollar rose slightly Friday against most major currencies although it failed to rally after the White House announced a package to trim the budget deficit by $76 billion over the next two fiscal years, dealers said. "I would say it was a mild disappointment," said Robert Hatcher, corporate dealer for Barclays Bank PLC. The market greeted the accord with relief, however, after weeks of patiently awaiting a bud-

The dollar traded in tight ranges throughout the week as traders expressed bewilderment with contradictory predictions from congressional and White House negotiators on whether they would reach an accord on deficit cuts by Friday's deadline. There were also widely differing projections on the size of the cuts. The Gramm-Rudman balancedbudget law mandates $23 billion in spending cuts if the budget deficit is not reduced by at least that amount. A provision in the law allows the automatic cuts to be rescinded if an agreement is reached. In Zurich, the dollar hit a record low against the Swiss franc Friday, with traders worried over the failure to nail down a final budget deficit agreement before trading closed in Europe. A Zurich dealer said the market also was upset by the U.S. Department of Labor's report of a 0.4 percent increase in the Consume

The talks are being viewed as a test of Washington's ability to deal with the budget deficit and other economic issues after the Oct. 19 stock market collapse. "It's hard to find enough in those

nance minister, Gustavo Petricioli. has appealed for confidence in the economy following a sharp decline in the peso and predicted that the eurrency would soon rebound

The peso skidded to 2,275 to the dollar from 1,715 on Wednesday after the central bank said it would withdraw support from the currency in free trading. The currency plunged further Thursday to 2,550. Exchange-rate quotes were not available on Friday.
In New York, U.S. banks, which hold billions of dollars in loans to Mexico, said that the drop would not affect Mexico's ability to make payments on its foreign debt of $103 million, the second-largest in the developing world.

"This is not going to affect their ability to pay," a New York banker said Thursday, "This is an action designed to keep their foreign reserves at high levels."

ln his speech to Congress on Thursday, Mr. Petricioli asserted that "the well-being of the great majority will not be directly reduced" by the government's ending of support of the currency. He referred several times to a run on the peso five years ago, empha-sizing that this time the government was acting to maintain its foreign reserves and would avoid exhausting them as it did in the earlier crisis. In 1982 Mexico also suspended principal repayments on foreign debt, touching off a Third World debt emergency.

Mr. Petricioli said that the gov ernment had withdrawn support for the free exchange rate of the of 141 percent. peso to save foreign reserves.

They are saying that never again will they be without reserves as they were to 1982, and never again will they allow themselves to be put in a position in which they have to go to the United States Treasury for a short-term loan."

Government officials and bankers in Mexico said that the couotry's foreign reserves stand at a record $15 billion.

The free rate is used mostly by tourists and in commercial transactions along the U.S. border.

Asserting that it was impossible to control the rate because of the 1,952-mile (3,120-kilometer) border, Mexico chose to withdraw from the market and let the peso find its own level, Mr. Petricioli

He said that 75 percent of all of Mexico's foreign-exchange transactions take place at the official controlled rate, including imports, exports and payment of the subjective ships of the subj foreign debt. That rate was set Thursday at 1,710 to the dollar, down only slightly from Wednes-

Speaking privately, Mexican government officials said that they expect the peso to stabilize about 20 percent below the level where it was trading early this week. They said the policy of letting the peso float freely was likely to continue indefinitely. The government's action is expected to affect ordinary Mexicans by contributing to a surge of infla-tion, already at a record annual rate "The people of Mexico lose out

Over the centuries kings and demagogues have doubled as generals, and generals have doubled as diplomats and priests; a commanding officer, like the army that serves under him, is the product of a particular society, and the qualities that his position calls for vary from age to age and place to place.

Instead of trying to establish an ideal model of generalship, John Koegan has therefore decided to construct his book around a series of case studies.

His technique is much the same as it was in "The Face of Battle," his classic account of the changing role of the ordinary soldier, and the results it yields pia in 1896. Each section can indeed be read simply "for the story." For a start, Keegan knows how to bring fighting alive on the page, from his wide-angle accounts of Shiloh and Waterloo to his close-up of the "brutal scrimmage" in which a group of Mac-edonian spearmen met their death — "a prolonged, noisy, angry, fear-smelling bont of shoving and thrusting. He also has a sure eye for the incident or quota-

the Pyrences in A.D. 778 and the Italians in Ethio-

tion that conveys a man's style. Grant, for instance, cigar clenched between his teeth, agreeing with Sherman that the first day's fighting at Shiloh had been "the devil's own day" — "Lick 'em tomorrow, Unlike the common run of military history, "The Mask of Command" is marked by great intellectual liveliness. The information it contains —on medals, say, on drill, on the impact of the telegraph - is almost always given a social context, and the aneodotes that enliven its pages shouldn't obscure the fact that there are recurrent themes binding it together, touching on everything from the role of staff officers to the part played in generalship by ritual and oratory.

Take the question of whether a general's place is at the front of his troops, in the thick of the light. For Alexander, the answer was always. For Wellingwas too restricted to inhibit him from exercising command close to the battle line. For Grant, or so Keegan suggests, it was "Never if I can help it." Not that Grant's physical courage was in doubt; but in the 50 years since Waterloo the musket had been extensively replaced by the rifle, and the danger of his army being left leaderless was simply too great. Finally, by way of the "château generals" of 1914. 18, ensconced deep behind the lines, we arrive at the spectacle of Hitler in the various lairs from which be conducted his war — trading on his earlier experience as a frontline soldier for propaganda purposes but in practice, thanks to radio, even farther removed than the World War I commanders from the actual fighting.

> So why did they win? The horses who captured the world's richest race had something in common. They were late-blooming, lightly raced horses who had the advantage of being fresh and sharp for the Classic. The champions they beat (Slew o' Gold in 1984, Chief's Crown in 1985, Turkoman in 1986) had all gone through long cam-paigns and were presumably worn

The challenger who has the force of history on his side is the Canadian colt, Aflect. And he has plenty of handicapping merit, too.

Ferdinand and Alysheba, the winners of the last two Kentucky Derbies, are both admirable, tough racehorses. But Alysheba, in particular, has had a tough campaign; the Classic will be his ninth Grade I stake in eight months. He was so hard-pressed to win his last start, the Super Derby at Louisiana Downs, against a weak field that he looked as if his schedule had finally taken a toll. Ferdinand has had a busy season, too, though trainer Charlie Whittingham did give him a two-month midsummer break to rev him up for the Breeders' Cup. He is the horse to beat, but Affect may nevertheless be good enough and sharp enough to beat him. Afleet had never won a major stakes before September, when he

In the NFL, a Weekend of Backup Quarterbacking

NEW YORK — lojured National Football League quarternot able to make it at all. They have hurt their ankles or shoulders or knees or egos. So backups will become major factors on Sunday, and that means teams with sophisticated defenses could fool some of the inexperienced second-stringers.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Indianapolis (5-4) at New England (4-5) — Tom Ramsey, starts at quarterback for the Patriots, although Steve Grogan will back him up if his shoulder is better. Ramsey, the fifth quarterback to start for New England this season, will try to bring some backfield movement to a stagnating offense. The Patriots are forced to go with a pair of rookies at offensive tackle, trying to open holes for a poor running attack. Las Vegas oddsmakers have made the Patriots 2½-point favorites.

Pittsburgh (5-4) at Cincinnati (3-6) — Both quarterbacks Prinsburgh (3-4) at Cincinnan (3-6) — Both quarterbacks are being boosed by the home fans, so this week it's Boomer Esiason's turn while Mark Malone gets a break. Wide receiver Louis Lipps has a hamstring pull and may not play for the Steelers; Earnest Jackson, their top runner, has a back problem. These are the conference's top running teams, with Cincinnao ranked first in the league, Bengals by 5½.

San Diepo (8-1) at Seattle (6-3) — Chuck Knox of the Sephanks doesn't usually use the sand "crucial" in Newtonber.

Seahawks doesn't usually use the word "crucial" in November. But he says this is the Western Division championship game. That means that the battered Dan Fouts, who hasn't practiced this week fur the Chargers, will play at quarterback. San Diego can be run against, and the Seahawks have Curt Warner, but Dave Krieg's passing in recent weeks has fallen off. Seahawks Denver (5-3-1) at Los Angeles Raiders (3-6) - For a team that was in the Super Bowl, Denver has been disrupted - the same lineup hasn't started two games. Still, the Broncos keep plugging along, patching up the running game while John Elway does amazing things every week. They use a shotgun on first down oow but would like to find a running game. The Raiders can't understand why Al Davis didn't get them quarterback. Broncos by 21/2.

Buffalo (4-5) at New York Jets (5-4) — This should be an air game unless New York's Freeman McNeil can produce a second straight outstanding running performance. Quarterback Jim Kelly will be looking at inexperienced Jet cornerbacks — Kerry Glenn and Carl Howard — while Ken O'Brien is well aware of the three rookies who start on the Buffalo defense, although one of them is Cornelius Bennett.

backs abound this week, many of them limited in practice or show more blitzes than any other team in the NFL and will not able to make it at all. They have hurt their ankles or continue that against Bernie Kosar. Warren Moon likes to go deep, but Cleveland allows barely five yards per passing attempt, Browns by 2.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE
New York Giants (3-6) at New Orleans (6-3) — Phil
Simms's sprained knee will not allow him to start, but Jell Rutledge is 2-0 since taking over. Without Lawrence Taylor (or with him, hampered by a hamstring injury) the Giant defense will be busy trying to hall Rueben Mayes. Philadel-

Cleveland (6-3) at Houston (6-3) — Houston sees the playof is as a possibility for the first time since 1980, and this is a battle for first place in the Central Division. The Oilers run. It won't be that easy for New Orleans. Saints by 2½. Detroit (2-7) at Chicago (7-2) — When last seen on Monday night, Jim McMahon was hobbling on a bad ankle. But no matter: The Bears say he'll play. DeBerg plays and Vinny Testaverde sits and DeBerg is playing mistake-free football. In fact, if Joe Montana's strike game were thrown out, DeBerg would be the conference's highest-rated quarterback. 49ers by 6.

Atlanta (2-7) at Minnesota (5-4) — The Vikings are one of three clubs whose resulars are 5-1 (Chicago and San Diego are three clubs whose regulars are 5-1 (Chicago and San Diego are the others), but they have an injured interior line. That could lead to a big game for Atlanta's nose tackle, Tony Casillas, whose unit has given up the most yards in the conference.

St. Louis (3-6) at Philadelphia (4-5) — The Eagles are battered after four straight post-strike games against East Division opponents. The last time these teams met. Neil Lomax picked Philadelphia apart with almost 300 yards, but the Eagles came away with a close victory. St. Louis has trouble stopping runners. Eagles by 7.

INTERCONFERENCE Green Bay (3-5-1) at Kansas City (1-8) — Who are the quarterbacks? Frank Seurer, who made his NFL debut against the Jets, starts again for the Chiefs as Coach Frank Gansz looks at rookies and second-year players. Meanwhile, Green Bay's Randy Wright has been unable to practice because of injuries, but Forrest Greeg will try to use him rather than rookie Don Majkowski. Chiefs by 4.

Miami (4-5) at Dallas (5-4) — Danny White is being benched for what Coach Tom Landry is calling "rest" as Dallas braces for two games in five days. Steve Pelluer will start for the first time this season at quarreback. Dan Marino has Mark Direct back after missing one game and Miami

Oil, Sand Par for Kuwaiti Golf | College Basketball Season

MINA AL-ZOUR, Kuwait ---At Buck Sands Golf Clnb in Kuwait's southern desert, the greens are called browns and the fairways are weighed down with crude oil to keep sand from whipping into players' eyes.

A faint whiff of petroleum hovers over the par 73, 18-hole course close to the border with Saudi Arabia, where Getty Oil has its headquarters and exploits the Wafra oilfield jointly with the government.

It's so desolate that one player, Frank Henley, jokes, "We've got one golfer who went out there and never came back." But for Henley and the 70 members of the unique-club,~ mainly American and British, it's a place to hone their golfing . skills as well as a social center.

The "browns" are dark sand, dampened with a 60-40 mixture of lubricating oil and diesel fuel. Instead of lawn mowers, special scrapers are used to keep their surfaces smooth. The sand and gravel fairways are kept in control with straight crude oil. Each player carries an 18-inch-square (50-centimeter-square) patch of plastic grass, from which he hits the ball if it is in the defined area of the fairway. When the ball's in the rough - patches of tough desert vege-tation — they play it as it lies.

"It'll tear you up trying to get a ball out of there," said Henley, a U.S. oilman and a longtime resident of the Middle East. "If you get a ferocious wind, it can make a big difference," said the club's pro, Frank MeLaugh-lin, of Southend, England. Members in the clubhouse tell of one golfer who, with the desert wind at his back, drove a ball 406 yards (371 meters).

Among the hazards the golfers have to grapple with are ponds containing effluence from a nearby petroleum plant. "It's quite clean," said one player. "Fish swim in it." The 6,856-yard course is be-

Zimmer to Return to Cubs as Manager

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Cubs on Friday named Don Zimmer their new manager, filling the vacant post with a man they fired less than two years ago.

Zimmer, sacked as Chicago's third base coach in 1986, is reunited with the newly appointed director of baseball operations, Jim Frey—who was fired as manager along with Zimmer. Frey was rehired earlier this month after Dallas Green resigned as general manager.

Zimmer, this season a coach for the San Francisco Giants, signed a two-year contract. The Cubs, who finished in last place in the National League East, dismissed Manager Gene Michael in early September.

Zimmer, 56, managed at San Diego in 1972-73, Boston from 1976-80 and Texas in 1981-82. He has a 620-600 managerial record, with two second- and two third-place finishes.

Scots Lead in Hawaii: Ueno Holds Edge

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) - Sandy Lyle and Sam Torrance, playing in howling winds and driving rain, gave Scotland a three-shot lead after Thursday's second round of the World Cup of Golf. Lyle had a bogey-free round of 69 and moved into a tie with Ian Woosnam of Wales (a 70) for the individual lead at 137 at the tournament's halfway point. Torrance's 71 gave the Scots a 36-hole total of 5under-par 283. The U.S. team of Ben Crenshaw and Payne Stewart (both had 73s) dropped back to second place at 286. Sweden and Australia, both at 287, were the only other team under par in the 32-country chase for the $200,000 first prize. In Miyazaki, Japan, Tadami Ueno shot a bogey-free 68 Friday to maintain a one-shot lead midway through the Dunlop Phoenix tournament. Ueno's two-round total of 134 is 10-under-par. Hiroshi Makino (a 67 Friday) was at 135; one stroke back were Koichi Uchara (69) and American Craig Stadier (65).

NCAA Drug Tests Get Judicial Setback

SAN JOSE, California (AP) - The National Collegiate Athletic Association's involuntary drug-testing program violates the Constitution, a Superior Court judge ruled Thursday in barring the organization from testing Stanford athletes in all sports except men's basketball and football.

Orr has a converted forward, 6-foot-8 LaFester Rhodes, starting at center, while Texas Coach Bob Judge Conrad Rushing said he would allow limited tests to continue in basketball and football because there was evidence of steroid and cocaine a 6-9 Brazilian, in the pivot. use in those sports. Rushing ordered the NCAA to cease testing in 26 sports and to return to court Dec. 4 with a plan for testing in the two excepted sports. He issued the order in a preliminary injunction and said he would decide at the December hearing whether to make it permanent.

The ruling applies only to Stanford, but it could influence other athletes and schools to challenge the program.

Prince Malko, French-Made 007

By Edward Cody Washington Post Service

PARIS — For a great number of espionage-minded Frenehmen, last month's military takeover in remote Ouagadougou came as no surprise. They had read all about it three years ago when Gérard de Villiers published the 76th book in his Prince Malko Linge spy series, "Coup in Ouagadougou.

It was not the first time de Villiers's fictional superhero was ahead of the news. The prince was husy rescuing a CIA mole endangered by the breakup of the Marxisi government on the island of Grenada in mid-1982 in book No. 67, "Red Grenada." Fifteen months later, with the real CIA taken by surprise, the govern-ment of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop actually did break up, and the Reagan administration ordered an invasion.

"My books are an extension of journalism," de Villiers said in a receot interview. Maybe. But from a workaday reporter's point of view, they are rather an extension of journalists' fantasies about what they would write if they did not have to stick to the sober facts. And businessmen's fantasies. And salesmen's and bureaucrats' fantasics. And millions of other Freneb resders' fantasies, stimulated and caressed over the last 22 years in 88 books that have sold more than half a mil-lion copies each in France alone.

By de Villiers's reckoning, the books are on literature, or even novels. He calls them only stories. But the instinct to reach out and pick one off the paperback rack at airports and train stations is so strong in France that Prince Malko Linge has become as much a part of the folklore as James Bond in English-speaking coun-

There are real spies in those sweary backwaters, patieotly hribing officials, listening to one another's telephones and hoping for a career break that will take them to Europe. And there are Prince Malko readers who arrive in the same Third World capitals, finding in real life that they spend long hours alone in hotel rooms and perspire unceasingly while trying to cope with an opaque society whose phooes never work. Nothing so dull for Malko. He flies there first-class on Air France, sipping champagne all the while. newspaper France-Soir, the 57year-old de Villiers begins work on each new book by spending a week or 10 days at the scene of its action. From Beirut to Colombo to San Salvador, he hangs out with correspondents and interviews local figures as if preparing a news article. Then, armed with his notes and a street map, he returns to Paris to write in his elegant apartment on Avenue Foch. After drawing up a plot outline and defining the characters Malko will face, de Villiers types a first draft in rapid bursts. "I try to put on music of the country I am writing on," he says. "I think the music brings things out that you have registered in your brain without realizing it." Two editors read his handiwork and send it back with corrections and suggestions. A second draft, incorporating their improvements, is typed and sent to the printer. The process takes six weeks. It is repeated four times a year.

Prince Malko narratives are full of factual trivia. Street names are right. The name of the fash-ionable restaurant is spelled correctly. Weapons are technically described for the connoisseur. The plots spring straight from the headlines. His most recent book, "The Oman Hostage," deals with attempts to rescue an American kidnap victim held by Lebanese militiamen working through the Iranian Embassy in Oman. The hostage is William Buckley - in reality as well as in the book the CIA station chief in Beirut before he was kidnaped and tortured to death by Iranian-linked terror-

"What counts are the details." de Villiers says. "If all the details are true, so what about the story." Translations of Prince Malko's adventures have not found a large American andience, but the series has sold heavily in West Germa-
